LETTER

Response from the Editor
in Chief

Thank you for raising several important issues that impact authors particularly those in developing countries. The quality of writing is obviously important and is sometimes a reason for a paper to be rejected. We do not have the resources in-house to substantially rewrite papers. I am aware that services have grown up in a number of countries that offer editing of scientific papers for a fee. Another alternative is to ask for help from within an academic institution—often help can be obtained without payment.

Moreover, I would like to assure you that papers are accepted on merit irrespective of the country of origin or the status of the author(s). Papers from developing countries can make a valuable contribution, although a number are rejected because they do not have a wider international appeal and are more suited to a regional publication.

Finally, I would like to reassure authors that we do not charge fees for publication unless the author requires open access.

Phil Wiffen

Pain Research Unit, Churchill Hospital, Oxford, UK

Correspondence to Professor Phil Wiffen, Pain Research Unit, Churchill Hospital, Oxford OX3 7LE, UK;

phil.wiffen@ndcn.ox.ac.uk

Provenance and peer review Not commissioned; internally peer reviewed.

© European Association of Hospital Pharmacists (unless otherwise stated in the text of the article) 2018. All rights reserved. No commercial use is permitted unless otherwise expressly granted.

To cite Wiffen P. Eur J Hosp Pharm 2018;25:e4.

Published Online First 24 May 2018

► <http://dx.doi.org/10.1136/ejhpharm-2018-001597>

Eur J Hosp Pharm 2018;25:e4.

doi:10.1136/ejhpharm-2018-001614